We all love spending the long, sunny days of summer outdoors with our furry companions, but being overeager in hot weather can spell danger.

- Even the healthiest of pets can be afflicted by dehydration, and heat stroke.

Following these simple precautions will be essential in your animals summer survival.

- Make regular visits to your veterinarian.
- Know your animals limits in high temperature weather.
- Hydrate, hydrate, hydrate your pet and yourself.

Know the Warning Signs

- Excessive panting, difficulty breathing and increased heart rate are all tell-tale signs of a heat stroke.
- Drooling, weakness or stupor and a bright red tongue are also signs.
- If your animal has a “smushed” face, like a Pug, English Bulldog or Persian cat– your animal is at an increased risk as these animals cannot pant as effectively.
- Overweight, elderly and animals with heart or lung issues should be kept cool and air-conditioned as much as possible.

- Leaving your animal in a parked vehicle for even 10 minutes can prove to be fatal.
- Even with the windows rolled down, animals should never be left in a vehicle without air conditioning.

- In addition, do not let your animal roam on hot concrete, as the increased temperatures could easily burn the paw pads.

Summer Style

- Keep animals with longer fur clipped into a “summer” cut where the fur is less than 2 inches long all over the body.
- Mainly white animals should be coated with animal-safe sunscreen if exposed to the sun for extended periods of time.
